We are excited to welcome you to
The Future of Global Health (#TFGH16)

Check out conversation hub leader and one-on-one mentor bios
We have an amazing line-up of 40 global health professionals ready to engage with you in small group conversation hubs and one-on-one mentoring conversations! These are professionals with diverse backgrounds and a wealth of knowledge to share. Take a look at their bios. We think you'll agree.

How does this unconference work?
Here's how the evening will go. Doors will open at 6:00 PM, and so will the open bar. After check-in and opening remarks, you will have opportunities to participate in conversation hubs and one-on-one mentor conversations, in addition to networking with peers. You can move between discussion groups, leave your conversation hub for a one-on-one mentor conversation or to chat with a new or old friend, or any combination thereof.

Stop by a conversation hub
Around the room there will be 22 small group conversation hubs, each led by experienced global health professionals. Be aware, hubs are small, with room for approximately eight people per hub. Why is that? Because we want you to be able to participate, ask questions, and have interactive discussions.

Sign up for one-on-one mentoring
Ever wish that you had the opportunity to talk with people at the top of their professions about how they got there? Or ask for career advice from senior human resource professionals who vet candidates? This is your chance! Sign up on-site for a ten-minute conversation window with our one-on-one mentors.

And more!
This fun evening will also offer ample opportunity for informal networking, with a few things we've worked up to encourage new connections. Exchange virtual business cards (download a barcode reader for Apple or Android) and get connected with people in the global health community, visit our selfie station, and participate in GHFPII's photo contest.

Where is this happening again?
